$3,507 boost to Ulverstone Surf Club

VOLUNTEER life saving services at the Ulverstone Surf Club are set to receive a $3,507 boost thanks to the Rudd Government, Federal Member for Braddon Sid Sidebottom said.

The funding comes from the Rudd Government's National Emergency Volunteer Support Fund.

The funding will go towards purchasing audio-visual training equipment for volunteer life guards, Mr Sidebottom said.

"Our volunteer life guards at all our North-West surf clubs do a remarkable job to keep our communities safe at the beach, so I am very pleased that the Rudd Government has been able to chip in and contribute to the costs of their ongoing training," Mr Sidebottom said.

"The Ulverstone Surf Club was one of 179 projects across Australia to receive a grant through the program.

The funding comes as part of the Rudd Government's ongoing commitment to supporting volunteers in their essential work.
